

Out There

Narration 6

After all this manic madness, Jade was pleased to get away. She had never had so much chocolate and eaten so many sweet things in her entire life. The noise and the flashing lights had made her so dizzy that, even as she flew away, her head seemed to be spinning round.

In time Planet Wild Child became a distant memory. Jade began to relax and, rather than thinking about her next destination, she took a few minutes to look left and right out of the cockpit window. The pace of her heart slowed down as she took it all in. The stars were set in galaxies like jewels in a crown. She was amazed at their stunning beauty. Her mind moved from thinking about the wonderful designs and patterns to picking out the individual stars, each one unique in its colour and brightness. How many of those stars have their own planets? Is there a chance of life there? Who has ever taken the trouble to visit them or even notice them?

All these thoughts filled Jade with a sense of wonder. For these few moments she was able to stop and take in the universe.
